

Multiplicative relationships in context

- This multiplicative relationship applies to lots of real life contexts. Select which of the following show real life use of ratio. Tick 2 correct answers
 - ☒ recipes
 - ☒ currency conversion
 - ☐ lowest common multiple
 - ☐ reciprocals
- For every £2, you get $3. This means for every £1, you receive $ 1.50 . Fill in the blank
- To make vegetable soup, Jun needs 8 carrots, 4 potatoes, 200 ml water and 2 stock cubes. Jun has 23 carrots, 10 potatoes, 600 ml of water and 5 stock cubes. What must be added for the correct ratio? Tick 1 correct answer
 - ☐ Nothing. The ratio is correct.
 - ☒ 1 carrot, 2 potatoes and 1 stock cube
 - ☐ 4 carrots, 4 potatoes and 1 stock cubes
 - ☐ 8 carrot, 3 potatoes and 2 stock cubes
- Here is a ratio table showing the conversion from pounds (£) to USA dollars ($). Select the incorrect ratio. Tick 1 correct answer

Pounds (£)	USA dollars ($)
1	1.25
3	3.75
11	12.50
15	18.75

- ☐ £1 to $1.25
- ☐ £3 to $3.75
- ☒ £11 to $12.50
- ☐ £15 to $18.75

5 Select the statements which are equivalent to "For every £1, you get €2.50" Tick 4 correct answers

- ☒ For every £12, you get €30
- ☒ For every £5, you get €37.50
- ☒ For every €12, you get £30
- ☐ For every £0.80, you get €1.40
- ☒ For every €27.50, you get £11

6 Starting with the best exchange rate, put the exchange rates for converting £ to $ in order from best to worst. (I.e. the more dollars you get per pound is the best exchange rate.) Use numbers to show the correct order

1	For every £3, you get $4.50
2	For every £12, you get $15.60
4	For every £1, you get $1.
3	For every £50, you get $60

